Summary

As outlined in the attached curriculum vitae, I have been a prominent leader in paramedicine research, scholarship, and mentorship for over a decade. I am honored to be the first paramedic in Jordan to earn a PhD. Currently, I serve as an Associate Professor of Paramedicine at Jordan University of Science and Technology and as an adjunct lecturer at Monash University. I am also actively engaged in research, regularly contributing to peer-reviewed publications and collaborating with international paramedicine societies and educational institutions. I am dedicated to advancing the professionalism of paramedic care and fostering the development of modern practices in the field. Below is a summary of my teaching, supervision and research accomplishments:
